
UNCLE SAM SLAMS DOOR ON FAMILY LIVING NINE YEARS IN QUINCY

TAKE TRIP, BECOME 'ALIENS'

Federal Officials Stop Re-Entry From Sweden of Hallgren, Wife and Daughter

Uncle Sam has slammed his doors in the face of J. E. Hallgren and his family, for nine years residents of Quincy.

Hallgren, his wife and his daughter, Emma, are now on the high seas, on the steamer Stockholm bound for Sweden—heart-broken.

In Quincy, Hallgren's son, Edward, is a successful young business man, and with him is his young sister, Bertha.

The immigration authorities have severed the little family, and it is doubtful if they will ever be reunited until the brother in Quincy gives up his business and this country and returns to Sweden to live.

PROTESTS HONORED.
The father, mother and daughter were deported over the protests of Senator Lodge, the congregation of the Quincy Lutheran Church, and many friends of the family residing in Quincy.

Nine years ago the Hallgrens made their home in Quincy. They came to Quincy from Sweden, bringing their children with them. One daughter, Bertha, was born after the family arrived in the United States.

The Hallgrens were thrifty, and made excellent citizens. They prospered and some months ago the father decided to take his wife and two daughters on a visit to Sweden, to visit his kith and kin. The son, Edward, remained in Quincy to attend to his business.

HELD UP AT NEW YORK.
When the family returned to the United States the immigration authorities held them up. After detaining the family at Ellis Island for a considerable time, it was ruled that the older girl was "indecipherable" and in such a condition, might become a public charge.

The parents were held to be "accompanying aliens," although they have resided in this country for years. The younger daughter, Bertha, born in the United States, was admitted and was turned over to her brother.

Friends of the family in Quincy protested to the government authorities. They insisted that for nine years they had known the older Hallgren girl and that she was not feeble-minded and would not become a public charge. The authorities refused to accept bonds, which were offered as a safeguard against the girl becoming a public charge.

FORCED TO YIELD.
Finally, when the friends of the family and Senator Lodge had exhausted the resources at their command there was nothing left for the parents and daughter to do but return to Sweden.

They were placed on the steamship Stockholm, after a tragic leave-taking from the son and daughter who are remaining in this country. While the wife, husband and daughter will be forced to spend some time in Sweden, efforts are being continued to have Mrs. Hallgren admitted to live in the United States, and in the meantime their home in Quincy will be kept in readiness for them.

FOUR GARMENT SHOPS LOOTED BY THIEVES
Looting of four Boston garment shops of $6,000 in dresses, silks and other cloth was reported to the police today.

Three of the left robberies were committed in the same Stuart street building, while the fourth was in the West End.

The three shops of Samuel Ratcliffe, near Herman House and Julia Cohen, all of No. 19, in Stuart street, reported losses of $1,000, $1,000 and $1,000, respectively. The fourth shop, in the West End, reported dresses and a quantity of silks, all valued at $600, as missing.

Fingerprint experts were called at work by the police in connection with the reported lootings.

Life of Sorrow

MRS. HELEN MARA. When she and four others plunged to death, a surprising series of family misfortunes came to an end.

DEATH PLUNGE VICTIMS LONG UNFORTUNATE

The Congress street bridge accident, which claimed five lives when an automobile plunged into Port Point Channel, came as a tragic climax to an almost incredible series of misfortunes that have beset the family of Mrs. Helen Mara during a five-year period of endless sorrow.

FATHER DIED FIVE YEARS.
Five years ago Michael Mara, the father, was stricken by an incurable disease. He refused to go to a hospital until last August, when Mrs. Mara insisted she could take care of her little boy.

At that time Teddy, aged 11, was in the hospital recovering from injuries suffered in an automobile accident. Matthew, five years old, was receiving out-patient treatment at the Children's Hospital for spinal trouble.

When Mara was finally forced to go to the hospital, Teddy was released, but only a short time later physicians at the Children's Hospital found that Matthew had become crippled and he was received as a bed patient.

BABY DIPHTHERIA VICTIM.
Only last week George, the baby of the family, recovered from an attack of diphtheria and the fatal automobile ride was taken on Mrs. Mara's belief that it would be good for him.

Funerals for Mrs. Mara, Jennie, Elizabeth and Baby George will be held tomorrow from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Mara, parents of Matthew Mara, who live at No. 7 Foster court, Medford.

ARMSBEE CHILD MAY AGAIN BE STATE WARD
Buffeted around for the ten years of her existence, little Dorothy Armsbee, innocent cause of a bitter legal fight to establish her personality, and the unwitting cause of sending a woman to an insane hospital, will soon be a public charge again.

The child who was claimed by two women has been living on the farm of Frank R. Head, five miles from Westfield, Mass., for the past four years. The woman alleged mother of the little girl has disappeared and the Head family, about to break up their home, will turn the child over to the State authorities.

Mrs. William W. Ormsbee, also known as Mrs. Dorcas Vincent, has paid only $20 toward the support of the child during the past four years, although when she placed the youngster in the care of Mrs. Head she agreed to pay $10 a week for her daughter's support.

The Boston courts decided that Mrs. Ormsbee was the mother of the child five years ago, when she was vigorously contested by Miss Emily P. Turner, daughter of Joseph Turner, who claimed the child was his own, having been born out of wedlock in Montreal, Can. and later placed in a home there. She insisted that Mrs. Ormsbee had accepted the child from the home, although the records showed that Mrs. Turner's baby had died.

ELOPERS QUIT DANCE TO CALL ON PARSON

Providence, Sept. 24.—Slipping quietly away from a dance, Earl Clinton Drake, honor man of the 1924 class of Brown University, and Miss Marian Louise Mills, Syracuse business, motored 70 miles to Portland, Me., where they were married.

The couple had planned to be married for some time, and while in the midst of a dance, they suddenly decided to elope and have the ceremony over with. They drove through the fog, awakened a judge who waited the five-day law and then found a justice of the peace, who married them.

ANTISALOON LEAGUE SETTLES $100,000 SUIT

Concord, N. H., Sept. 24.—The action brought by Francis E. Vert, right of Concord against the Anti-Saloon League of New York State and William H. Anderson, former state superintendent of the league, seeking $100,000 damages as the result of alleged slanderous statements made in a three-cornered assembly campaign in Sherborn County in 1922, have been settled by the league, it was announced by James J. Reisinger, attorney for Mr. Anderson. He refused to reveal the terms of settlement.

BROWN UNIVERSITY IS OPEN; HAS 1200 STUDENTS
Providence, Sept. 24.—Brown University began its 1924 year today with a total enrollment of 1,200 students, the largest in the college's history, and a freshman class of 400 freshmen, elected by animal and human tests from more than 100 applicants.

"It is the task of young men of the world to enter in the new era for which the weary nations are waiting," President Fawcett said, "it is a years to enter round the world and attempt the impossible. The old world's agonies are the new and their peoples the deepest."

BIG ZEPPELIN GIVEN 30-MILE TEST TODAY

ZR-3 Expected to Fly Across Atlantic to Boston

Next Week

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Sept. 24.—The thirty-hour duration flight of the dirigible ZR-3 began today. According to Dr. Eckener, director of the Zeppelin plant here, the cruise will be over northeastern Germany. After visiting Bremen, Hamburg and other important towns, the airship will pass Berlin, probably tomorrow, enroute over the city for an hour. Thence it will return to Friedrichshafen.

If the motors of the ZR-3 come up to expectations, the airship may start for Lakehurst, N. J., early next week. The exact date for the start will depend upon weather forecasts.

Zeppelin Visitor to Bring Heavy Mail to America

Friedrichshafen, Sept. 22 (A.P.)—German air post stamps for mail to be sent to the United States on the ZR-3 have been going like hot cakes here lately, the government post-office department having given notice weeks ago that "it would be wise to do your Zeppelin mailing early."

Stamp collectors were hopeful that special stamps would be issued for the trip, but the department did not do so, advising customers to use the ordinary air post stamps. Letters cost one mark, 24 cents, and postcards 12 cents.

MARRIED WOMEN WANT PAY IN MAIDEN NAMES

New York, Sept. 24.—The Lucy Stone League, an organization advocating the retention by married women of their maiden names, pretreated in a letter to Secretary of the Interior Hubert Work against the ruling of Comptroller General McCall requiring married women on the federal payroll to sign for salary checks in their husbands' names.

The League offered to show court decisions upholding the legal right of married women to use "their own names."

UNION PROVIDES DEATH BENEFIT FOR MEMBERS

Haverhill, Sept. 24.—The general office of the Shoe Workers Protective Union announces that contracts have been signed providing for a $100 death benefit for each member of the organization, with the privilege of the benefit being increased to $500 by the payment by each member of $1.50 per annum for each 100 additional. The privilege of membership is also extended to the immediate families of members.

With Boston as a base, the ZR-3 could fly around the world without replenishing its fuel, its builders declare, over a route as shown on the above map, a cruising range of 7,000 miles.

REDMOND AIDE INDICTED FOR CONSPIRACY

The mysterious personage, "L. Marvin Simmons," who is alleged to have done much of the brokerage work in New York for G. E. Redmond & Company, Inc., in the days prior to the closing of the Congress Street firm, was named in two indictments returned by the Federal Grand Jury, which charge him, Redmond himself and William N. Sheridan, Sr., and William N. Sheridan, Jr., with conspiracy and use of the mails to defraud in connection with the partial payment operations of the Redmond corporation.

Redmond was brought over from the East Cambridge jail, where he is still a prisoner, for contempt of court. He pleaded not guilty and went back to his life behind the bars. This is the first time, however, that "Simmons" has figured in the case as a defendant.

New Haven, Sept. 24.—Lieutenant Governor Bingham, Republican candidate for Governor, is ill at his home here. According to his physician, the Lieutenant Governor is suffering from the grip.

SOCIETY F O L K WILL PRESENT STREET FAIR

Copley square and the immediate neighborhood will take on the colorful appearance of an Old World carnival during the week of October 6, when Boston's first street fair is held.

"Uncle Sam's Market Place," as it will be called, will be engineered by society folk from all parts of Greater Boston for the benefit of Massachusetts disabled veterans in hospitals all over the country. Booths for the sale of almost anything, a community market, restaurant and cabaret, and even a midway are among the attractions. The community market will be run by Mrs. Lutz Anderson, Mrs. Thomas Motley, Jr., and Mrs. George E. Warren, co-chairmen of the James Marsh Jackson League, will have every afternoon and evening. Rosamund Blumhardt, Madeline Bosk.

Service Men Kick Against War Play In N. Y. Theatre

New York, Sept. 24.—Mayor Hylan in a letter addressed to Commissioner of Licenses William F. Quigley requested the closing of a production to discuss "objections to a play now running in this city." The objections to the production in question, one dealing with the life of the Marines during the war, are understood to have originated in one of the service branches, and as a result Admiral Plunkett, commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard and Major General Bullard, in command at Governor's Island, are to be invited to attend the meeting.

The "good weather" routes contain higher mountains than the more southerly routes. Ships will probably not be made at any point other than New York, San Diego and Seattle.

The distance between Lakehurst and Fort Worth is 1,044 miles, from Fort Worth to San Diego 1,239 miles, and from San Diego to Seattle 1,299 miles. From Lakehurst to Fort Worth will require 37 to 42 hours, from Fort Worth to San Diego 35 to 40 hours and from San Diego to Seattle 35 to 40 hours.

Barbara Endicott, Barbara Bradford, Edith Payson, Barbara Endicott and Barbara Bradford are among them.

A report by the chairman of the Cape exhibits at a general committee meeting at the home of Mr. Barrett Andrews indicates the fair will have an unusual display of Cape Cod products, such as cranberries, lobsters, sealions, etc. The chairman of these exhibits are Mrs. James Hall, Mrs. George H. Hall, and Mrs. Alice L. Weeks.

Dolls dressed in costumes will be donated by prominent actors and actresses for the theatrical booth.

VERMONT PLATFORM PRAISES COOLIDGE

Burlington, Vt., Sept. 24.—A platform declaring that Calvin Coolidge was the paramount issue before the State and nation was adopted today by the State Republican convention in session here. Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming, Republican four leader of the Sixty-ninth and Sixty-seventh Congress, in a keynote speech praised Republicanism for their loyalty to the party.

SHENANDOAH ON TRIP TO WEST COAST OCT. 3

Washington, Sept. 24 (Universal)—The route of the dirigible Shenandoah, sailing from Lakehurst, October 3, for the Pacific Coast, was announced by the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department.

The Shenandoah will be selected according to weather conditions. The "good weather" routes contain higher mountains than the more southerly routes. Ships will probably not be made at any point other than New York, San Diego and Seattle.

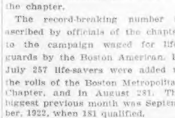

The distance between Lakehurst and Fort Worth is 1,044 miles, from Fort Worth to San Diego 1,239 miles, and from San Diego to Seattle 1,299 miles. From Lakehurst to Fort Worth will require 37 to 42 hours, from Fort Worth to San Diego 35 to 40 hours and from San Diego to Seattle 35 to 40 hours.

RECORD IN LIFE-SAVERS LAID TO BOSTON AMERICAN

With 525 persons qualified as life savers during the months of July and August of this year, the Boston Metropolitan Chapter of the American Red Cross had a record in this respect, according to an announcement made today to the chapter.

The record-breaking number is certified by officials of the chapter to the campaign waged for life guards by the Boston American. In July 237 life-savers were added to the rolls of the Boston Metropolitan Chapter, and in August 287. The highest previous month was September, 1922, when 181 qualified.

WOMAN SEEKS UNION CARD AS BARBER

Now Wields Razor Over Faces of Men Patrons in Quincy Shop

"Barber"—"Certainly—just a moment, please while I powder my nose." It's not only coming, fellows—it's here.

And if you belong to the union and think a razor crop is nothing for a woman to do, wait until you see the woman barber for her union card.

She got it—or rather she gave it. Miss Jennie Ciardelli, of America's barbers' shop, in Quincy square, a short time ago, is the first woman to break the female trail into the barbers' and hairdressers' association.

SEEKS UNION CARD. Miss Ciardelli has applied for membership in the Quincy local of the barbers' union which is duly affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Decision upon her story will be voted upon at the next meeting of the Quincy local, to be held October 2.

"Why not?" asks Miss Ciardelli. "Why not eight hours and the usual $15 a week for the woman who as well as the man?"

"I understand women have been doing it for years," she says. "I have been doing it for years and have not yet been admitted, but I have been told that she is no feeling against my admission in the Quincy local."

SHEDS HAIR RESULT. Women in the barbers' shops was natural outcome of the bobbing women's hair.

"They learned to cut hair, massage, give facials and scalp treatments as they're just as competent as men."

"I have applied for membership in the union because I think the men ought to be in it. Just as they're in other unions."

"Will the men really like the idea of a woman barber?"

"They certainly will!" laughs Miss Ciardelli. "They come for a massage and seem to like it pretty well. I think they could stand it while a woman barber gave them a haircut."

AN WORRY ALONG. Of course, if they didn't happen to like the haircut, or the razor slipped a bit—well, it wouldn't be so easy to let go their sewer words.

"But then—I don't think the men will mind. Women cook for them and mend their clothes and take care of them when they're sick and I guess they can worry along while a woman cuts their hair."

STATE IS 'SAFE' IN PUTNAM CRASH

Preliminary Report Shows
Commonwealth Suffers No
Loss by Shortage

Hartford, Sept. 24.—Governor Charles A. Templeton has received a preliminary report on the audit of State funds which he ordered following the disclosures of shortages in the Putnam National Bank, of which former State Treasurer G. Harold Gilpatrick was cashier, and indications are that the State has suffered no financial loss.

Governor Templeton said that certain conditions had been brought to light which ought to be changed, and which the people of the State had a right to know about, and that he would make public the results of the audit when it is officially completed.

"Nothing has been found so far that indicates that the State will suffer financial loss," said the governor.

Manila, Sept. 24 (AP).—Instructions issued by the State Department at Washington ordering all foreign consuls to refuse to issue bills of health to vessels carrying liquor to the Philippine Islands for beverage purposes were received here today, it was stated officially.

The ruling of the State Department, based on an interpretation of the Eighteenth Amendment by the Department of Justice last June, was contrary to the interpretation placed upon the Volstead Act in official circles here.

It was believed the dry law of the United States did not apply to unorganized territory, in which case, very Manila rule.

The collector of customs said that he would impose only the lowest fines on captains of ships who

BOXER GETS EVEN FOR 'DRUBBING' 9 YEARS AGO

Lancaster, Pa., Sept. 23.—John Ham Busenky, known in boxing circles as "Kid Bus", is feeling better after he sold a dose of nine years by giving Claude Horner, of this city, what he termed a "drubbing."

The boxer, after being arrested on a charge of assault and battery, said that nine years ago Horner beat him up when they were both youths and both driving cattle for the same man.

In the nine years Busenky grew up and became a prize fighter and then wanted his chance to get even. He gave him for a beating.

QUIMET AND GUILFORD SURVIVE IN NATIONAL GOLF MEET

HUB STAR WINS ON FIGHT

Armore, Pa., Sept. 24.—By a wonderful display of fighting heart on the last two holes, Francis Quimet, of Boston, former open and amateur champion, defeated Willie Hunter, former British amateur champion, by 2 up and 1 to play in the first round of the national amateur golf championship.

Hunter rallied after being six down to Quimet at the twenty-second, and had a chance to square the match at the thirty-fourth but suddenly collapsed, following Quimet's successful drive, in making his second shot on the thirty-sixth hole.

When Quimet was to drop his second in a year and a half to follow with a good third shot reaching the green again. "Well and shaking a fist," he said, "I am going to do it." He then hit a perfect shot.

Quimet's drive was the only one of the round to score less than 100. R. T. Winters, of St. Louis, Mo., won the second round by 1 up.

Winters, who was defeated by Quimet in the first round, was the only one of the round to score less than 100.

For twenty years the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers' Association and the Textile Council have adjusted all differences by negotiation. Semi-annual wage conferences have been a great asset to the city.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1924

BOSTON AMERICAN

Fall River is fortunate again, in that the ownership of her 111 cotton mills is in Fall River hands. The great business of the city is controlled from within the walls.

Minute Men of "We'll Try" City, on Mt. Hope Bay, Set All New England an Example of Courage

HAVING taken account of stock, and having definitely determined that the cotton textile industry has dragged its way over all the worst places on the road back to Prosperity, the 130,000 shareholders in Fall River, Inc., come on the air today to broadcast an optimistic message to all the rest of New England.

Properly enough, this message of optimism comes from Mt. Hope Bay.

It consists of but eight words:

"Have faith in New England—and cheer up!"

And when Fall River, almost entirely dependent upon a single industry which has been staggering from bad to worse and back again for considerably more than a year, can slap the rest of New England on the back and fairly shout such a message of hope and cheerfulness, it is time for every dyed-in-the-wool pessimist in these Six States to pack his bag and take to the woods.

Discouraged? Downhearted? If you visited the three-day Cotton Carnival the Minute Men of the famous textile city recently staged in the Armory, and if in particular you saw the Carnival parade of 300 gaily decorated motor-floats over a route seven miles long, which took place last Thursday night and which was cheered by fully 70,000 persons, you would know that Fall River, as the saying is, does not know the meaning of the words!

Just where Fall River found all the strength, all the courage, all the pep and all the enthusiasm which have sustained her Minute Men throughout a bad year is her own secret.

It may be an inheritance from the men who conducted the affairs of the town seventy years ago, when Fall River made up its mind to be a "town" no longer.

In 1854, when the textile settlement decided to step out of the short pants of town life and reach for municipal "longies," Fall River was a community of 12,000 people.

Just what was said in the town meeting at which this important step was decided upon, and who said it, may be written somewhere upon dust-covered rolls which have not been brought to light. The significant fact about that meeting, however, is that the leaders in the movement determined then and there upon a motto for the seal of the new city, and that this motto is:

"WE'LL TRY!"

Seventy years later, the national anthem of the community's dominant industry becomes the "Cotton Mill Blues."

Does Fall River join in the chorus?

She does NOT!

Come weal, come weal, Fall River is the very embodiment of her motto.

Learned gentlemen in editorial chairs write heavy and important leaders on a "Dying Industry," meaning the manufacture of cotton cloth; statisticians delve deep into bulky reports, and come up again with facts and figures intended to prove that the trouble with cotton is this, or that, or the other thing; mills here and there and elsewhere go on half time—or less—but Fall River, untimid, unafraid, undaunted, knows no other "tune" than:

"We'll try!"

That the recent depression in the cotton textile industry was more than a mere slump began to be apparent to Fall River along towards the close of last Winter. National attention suddenly was directed towards the city, and conditions in its mills, when one of the leaders in the politics of the town went away from home to deliver a public address.

There was a month or two of discussion, of allegation and stout denial, of publicity of one sort and another, when, one evening, the local newspapers printed the call of a captain of one of the militia companies for a meeting in the Armory, to discuss the advisability of a Cotton Week.

This first meeting was quickly followed by another, when prominent mill men appeared among the forty or fifty gentlemen in attendance and plans were outlined for a "special sales week" in the Fall River stores.

On the committee of three which was designated to take the matter in hand were a representative manufacturer, the president of the leading department store and an executive of the foremost textile trades union of the district.

At this point, the Industrial Committee of the Chamber of Commerce came into the movement,

OLD AND NEW IN A GREAT TEXTILE CENTRE

The committee of three became a committee of six. The plan was to fill the show windows and the shelves of Fall River's stores with FALL RIVER products, to strengthen the morale of the city by showing its people exactly what was produced in the community, and, inferentially, suggest to them that the world could not proceed much further without calling upon Fall River for the PRODUCTS of Fall River.

Things had advanced this far, and the Fall River public had begun to take notice, when the plan and purpose of the All-New England committee were made public and Fall River realized that here was an even better opportunity to tell the world about the excellence of its wares.

No community in New England was MORE in need of what New England Week could do for it than Fall River.

Fall River is hit harder by a depression in the cotton goods market than almost any other textile community in the North, for the reason that practically ALL her eggs are in the cotton mills egg basket.

Fall River can tell you about a hat factory, which employs 400 persons, and Fall River points with pride to the largest fuel oil factory in New England—with a capacity of a million barrels a month!—but with almost no other exceptions Fall River is dependent upon her mills.

At the same time, it must be said for Fall River that few if any other textile towns are in a better position to take prompt action on their own behalf. The 111 cotton mills of Fall River are owned by 55 corporations, but from top to bottom these 55 corporations are very largely Fall River organizations.

The executive officer of the cotton mill is the treasurer. Almost without exception, the treasurer of the Fall River company is a RESIDENT of Fall River. In many cases he represents the third or fourth generation of a family which has been identified with the industry from its beginning, about ten and one hundred years ago.

The agent of a cotton mill in Lowell, Nashua, Lawrence, Manchester, in the run of cotton-mill cities, faced with an emergency having to do with working conditions, hours of labor or the wages of labor, must take his instructions from a treasurer in some office building in Boston. So with the selling agent of the company, usually situated in New York. He, too, talks with a treasurer in Boston concerning the goods made in an establishment somewhere else in New England.

Fall River's mills—quite distinctly on the other hand—are in the hands of neighbors.

Does anyone recall how long ago it was that Fall River experienced her last general strike?

So much is printed from time to time about conferences between representatives of the textile unions and the Fall River manufacturers that it may surprise the general public to be told that Fall River has had no such trouble since 1904. Unions and manufacturers come together by agreement every six months to consider wage matters. Negotiation is a Fall River habit. For twenty years both sides have been willing to lay their cards on the table face up.

THIS was the community which, while the great stores of Boston and Providence and Worcester and Portland, and the smaller establishments of hundreds of other New England cities and towns, were making their wonderful display of New England-made goods, arranged an impressive showing of its own products for the greater encouragement of its own people.

Fall River knows now that the fifty neighborhood corporations which own its cotton mills have assets of more than $100,000,000.

The people of Fall River know today that the roofs of these great gray buildings of Fall River granite cover more than 4,000,000 spindles, in addition to scores of thousands of looms and carding machines.

When business is good, the mills of Fall River weave more than 2,000 MILES of cloth every day. A single plant employs 6,000 operatives!

Approximately one-fifth of all the spindles in the North, about one-ninth of all in the United States, are in Fall River.

There was no municipal appropriation for Fall River's Cotton Carnival. The "We'll try!" city could not afford one.

Soon after the first announcement was made, men began walking into the Main Street of Fall River the Chamber of Commerce and placing contributions on the desk in front of Secretary Herbert F. Sherwood. The Manufacturers' Association made a generous donation, but the average of the individual subscriptions was small. The exhibition in the Armory was made to pay for itself, the charge for booths being based upon the total cost of operations.

Thousands of Fall River folk, including the young people of the city's schools, stopped before the Armory exhibit of the Granite Mills and, perhaps for the first time in their lives, saw a loom in operation.

They went from one booth to another, enjoying thrill after thrill as they saw the contributions of their great city to the necessities and comforts of man.

Everything was interesting, from the red and blue bandanna handkerchiefs of the Algonquin Mills, the cretonnes and other offerings of the American Printing Company and the nainsooks of the King Philip, to the truly beautiful Stevens Spreads, in cotton and fine-line art-silk.

There were opening addresses by Chairman John S. Lawrence of the New England Week Committee, President Robert Amory of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, Joseph A. Parks of the Industrial Accident Board and Mayor Edmond P. Talbot.

Fall River derived no little encouragement from the friendly address of Mr. Amory, who said that among the reasons for the present situation were the short crops of two successive years, the depression in agriculture and the fact that the women of the world had chosen this time to turn from cotton to silk.

The high price of raw cotton, brought about by short crops, sent the price of cotton cloth to a point at which the dealer was reluctant to buy until his shelves were bare.

Mr. Amory saw hope in this year's larger supply of cotton, the denuded shelves of the retailer and at least the beginning of an improvement in the condition of the farmer and his family.

Half of Fall River visited the exposition in the Armory and the other half saw the carnival parade at night.

There is not room here to begin to tell about that parade, but its outstanding and first-prize-winning feature was the float of the Lincoln Mills, depicting a great three-story granite mill in Fall operation at night.

Men and girls could be seen at work in the brightly illuminated interior. There was the rattle and clatter and roar of mill machinery, as the factory-on-an-automobile motored along the seven-mile route. There was nothing but unanimous approval when the judges awarded the silver cup to the Lincoln Mills, one of several Fall River enterprises with which the good old name of Brayton continues to be honorably identified.

Fall River lined Broadway, Globe, East Main, South Main and other streets well into the night, to cheer a street parade which will be remembered for a generation. It was "carnival night" in more senses than one, for the morning revealed side-walks covered an inch or two deep with confetti.

Well, THAT'S Fall River!

Slightly discolored, but still in the ring. A bit groggy, maybe, but neither down nor out.

Filled with the good old "Up Guards and at 'em!" spirit.

Forgetting her own troubles, Fall River steps up to the microphone and tells all New England to be of good cheer.

What are we going to say in reply?

Let us make the answer:

"Good for YOU, Fall River, and more power to you! WE know what YOU'VE been up against. We know you do not want sympathy, but you will be glad to learn that the rest of us are marching in and out of the shops, these days, asking for Fall River-made goods and INSISTING upon seeing them.

"Buck up, old-timer! The little old wheel of business is about to turn around again; and before long, now, the world again will be calling for YOU.

"Think you can make the grade? Feel confident you can turn out those wonderful products of yours, at something like the old capacity?"

Just say something like that, to Fall River YOU know what Fall River will say.

"WE'LL TRY!"
